

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I have been apart of a local internet provider for over 6-7 years. They are a great local business and provide the best support and service around. There is never a busy signal and I do not have any problems with them. If you force out the small guys and leave only these big companies that only know the customers as a number, that would be a BIG mistake. I think that AOL and all those big providers are a monopoly and we, the customers, should be allowed to use local ISP's and their DSL lines and all other services available. Please do not cut off their DSL lines or hurt the small guy. I do not want to be a member of the corporate internet world providers, leave it to good solid local companies to continue to provide great service to their neighbors. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Fernando Rubio
